

Craft Activism Resources

Some of these books are on my shelf. Some I've only just found. I hope they inspire you!

Disclaimer If you use the links to Amazon, I will receive a small commission. However, the recommendations were not paid for. The recommendations are entirely my own.

I've never thought of myself as an activist. But the last 6 years or so, is bringing out more and more feelings of hopelessness and disgust with our leaders. Yes, most if not all of them. I have felt like there wasn't anything that I could do to change what is happening at our national level. Yes, you can give money. Yes, you can write postcards to voters. Yes, you can march. Yes, you can run for office yourself. And how about using your craft to make a difference? Here are some books and websites that may inspire you to be a craft activist as well!

Craft Activism is a lovely book. There are several ideas of projects that you and your like minded friends can accomplish.

Crafting the Resistance This book has a feminist bent and 23 projects for you to make from pussy hats to a Nag Bag. So fun!!

Guerrilla Kindness and Other Acts of Creative Resistance is another take on using your craft to make a statement and to change your world. There are projects involving all kinds of crafts from decoupage to embroidery.

How to be a Craftivist shows us how to develop a gentle, respectful protest through craft with respect and optimism.

Knitting for Good is just what the front cover says. It is a guide to create change through your personal knitting.

The Power of Knitting takes a historical perspective through stories of knitters who stitched to support their communities and society in general... from WWI forwards.

WEBSITES:

Craftivist Collective: <https://craftivist-collective.com/our-story/>

Tiny Pricks Project: <https://www.tinypricksproject.com/>

These projects can also be followed on Instagram and Facebook.